Take the c4cast.com tour!
A quick journey through our forecast community and its features.

Welcome to the ultimate source of community-based economic and finanacial forecasts, plus a vast collection of tools, tips, and chunks of just plain useful forecasting information. [FAQ]

Today's Feature Story

A number of forecasting contests have been conducted in the past. Such contests range from various wagering events, such as Superbowl pools, to various financial forecasting contests. Typically, such conventional contests seek to identify the best predictor for the outcome of a single event. For example, the Investorsforecast website allows participants to predict where the Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) will be and what the prices of certain stocks will be at the end of next week.

Today's Featured Commentary

The person submitting the most accurate prediction for the DJIA and the person submitting the most accurate prediction for an individual stock are each given a fixed monetary award, such as $300. Other contests in the financial arena typically allow participants to invest an imaginary amount of money, with the winner being the person whose portfolio is the largest.
